

New Book Teaches Essential Skills for Fathers!

How to Go from

"Missing" Dad to Hero!

45% of Fathers Are Missing This Crucial Parenting Skill
The 'Dad Influence' Is Crucial to Your Child's Development.

According to a 2009 national PTA poll, nearly half of all dads fall short of their parental responsibilities. Dads, claiming job and outside the home responsibilities, are seriously limiting their family time. The results could be consequential.

National storyteller K. Sean Buvala says one simple solution is to engage your children through bedtime storytelling. "Storytelling, in all its forms, is important for building reading and math skills," says Buvala. "It's also an easy way to spend quality time with your children."

In the DaddyTeller™ Book, Sean Buvala reveals:

- Children spend over 4 hours a day in various unsupervised activities such as television and the Internet.
- The average dad spends less than 30 minutes a day of focused time with their children.
- If you want your 14-year-old to talk with you, start telling them stories when they are 4.
- Storytelling increases literacy and make learning a more creative process.
- A step-by-step, word-for-word, action-by-action guide for dads to tell (not read!) stories with their children. Eight stories are included in the book.
- An online community for more stories, instructions and training videos.

About the Author: K. Sean Buvala, a father of four, has been a full-time national storyteller and business coach for over two decades; nationally travelled workshop and keynote presenter for 23 years; 17 years experience as a youth and family coordinator for a variety of nonprofit organizations; founder and director of Storyteller.net, the leading online resource for both tellers and listeners of stories; received the Oracle Award from the National Storytelling Network.

About the Book: 87 pages; 6"x9" perfect-bound paperback; ISBN 978-0-557-13160-0; ©2009; available via Amazon.com or through the author listed below; Ebook available

CONTACT: Sean Buvala (623) 298-4548 staff@daddyteller.com

www.daddyteller.com

Workshops and Keynotes Available from the Author.